The words “palazzo” (Italian), “palace” (English) or “palais” (French) and the other similar words come from the name of the Palatine hill in Rome (in Latin, Palatium). On this hill the patrician family Julia (“gens Julia” in Latin) owned some land and built their residence.

When Octavian became Roman emperor after his succession to Julius Cæsar their home and the name of the Palatine hill itself became synonymous with Imperial residence.
